Rabindranath Tagore

Sin hinduističkog filozofa i vjerskog mistika Devendranaha. Bengalski prozni i dramski pisac, skladatelj, ali je ipak i najcjenjeniji kao pjesnik (zbirka „Pjesma dara i žrtve“). Bio je snažan promotor indijske kulture na Zapadu i zapadne kulture u Indiji. Američki pjesnik Pound usporedio ga je s Danteom, a važno je istaknuti kako je dobitnik Nobelove nagrade za književnost 1913. godine.

Rabindranath Tagore

The son of the Hindu philosopher and religious mystic Devendranath, Rabindranath Tagore was a Bengali prose and drama writer, composer, and—above all—most highly esteemed as a poet (notably for his collection “Gitanjali” / “Song Offerings”).

He was a powerful advocate of Indian culture in the West and a promoter of Western culture in India. The American poet Ezra Pound compared him to Dante, and it is important to note that Tagore was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1913..
